

Yesterday was the anniversary of the day when, two years ago, the loyal masses of New York took the lead each appearing to vie with each other in taste. One team, drawn by six white horses, presented a splendid appearance. The turnout attracted great attention.

It may be mentioned here that the demonstration which was got up under the auspices of the Loyal League at New Orleans was heartily co-operated with by the Loyal National League, which showed its reciprocity of sentiment by furnishing a large contingent.

About four o'clock the committee and speakers marched over to stand No. 1 from the Fifth Avenue Hotel and in ations. (Affirmative.) It was with no little pain that I observed that many of those associated with me in political fellowship thought that circumstances had occurred which authorized them to withhold their support from the constituted authorities of the country, and that the time had arrived when they were duty bound to do so.

President will be a democrat. I think so because the great masses of the people are rather that way and the democrats are rather more familiar with the administration of government, and more clever, in my judgment, in the exercise of power than their opponents. But I don't if the next President will be the candidate of the democratic party. I do not believe that any party organization will succeed at the next Presidential election, and I will tell you why. The people of the great political parties of the country had distinguished leaders in the South in their organizations, and you had the influence of all the United States, its ability and patriotism to select from in your Cabinet and in your administration

Resolved, That the safety and interest of the State of Maryland, and especially of her well laboring people, require that the laws of this State which relate to the slave, and which are recognized by the law of Maryland, and that the aid of the United States, should be demanded by the President, ought to be asked and accepted to relieve the public and private inconvenience incident to the change.

Resolved, That we return our heartfelt thanks to Major General Schenck commanding this department, for the policy he has inaugurated and pursued, and that we will support him morally and physically, and that we exhort him to go on the good course to the utter confusion of treason and traitors.

Union Meeting in Philadelphia.

Albany, called on a lawyer in New York, and asked for a loan of one hundred dollars, and got it, and afterwards asked for further loan of one thousand dollars, which was refused, when Mr. Callicott said:—"If you will go to any of those persons who want his wife before the Legislature."

The Freshet at Albany.
ALBANY, APRIL 20, 1893.
The freshet subsides very slowly. The water is still the pier and docks.

A Discharged Soldier Drowned.
UTICA, N. Y., April 20, 1893.
A man named George Cook, a discharged soldier of the Hundred and Eighth New York Volunteers, was drowned in the Mohawk river, in this city, yesterday.
The unfortunate man was aged forty-five years.